Three of top school districts in state hail from Allegheny County

Pittsburgh Business Times

Upper St. Clair School District in Allegheny County and Tredyffrin-Easttown School District in Chester County top the list of the best-performing of the state's 500 public school districts, according to research by the Pittsburgh Business Times.

As part of the annual Guide to Western Pennsylvania Schools, which includes detailed information about more than 800 schools among the 106 school districts in the Pittsburgh metropolitan area, the Pittsburgh Business Times uses its formula to rank every district in the state based on three years of PSSA (Pennsylvania System of Student Assessment) test scores.

For the second consecutive year, Upper St. Clair topped the statewide rankings. Tredyffrin-Easttown moved up two spots from No. 4 last year. Mount Lebanon and Hampton Township school districts, both in Allegheny County, finished third and fourth, each down one spot, followed at No. 5 by Central Bucks School District in Bucks County.

In the seven-county Pittsburgh region, No. 12 Peters Township School District was tops in Washington County; No. 17 Franklin Regional School District led Westmoreland County districts; No. 55 Kiski Area School District led Armstrong County; No. 56 Beaver Area School District led all Beaver County districts; No. 81 Seneca Valley School District topped Butler County; and No. 98 Frazier School District was the highest scorer among Fayette County districts.

Below is the complete ranking of Pennsylvania school districts. Districts that cross county lines in the Pittsburgh metro list multiple counties. Two districts are not ranked -- Midland Borough School District in Beaver County and St. Clair Area School District in Schuylkill County -- due to the fact that they do not offer high schools and therefore do not have a full complement of tests on which to be rated.

Each school is scored by each test it takes (math, writing and reading for each grade tested). The school's/district's score is based on its percentage of students placing in the top two categories (advanced and proficient) on the PSSA. That score is then compared to its departure from the average for the set being compared (the Pittsburgh area or all of Pennsylvania).
